A vector database is a type of database that stores and manages high-dimensional vector data, such as images, videos, and text embeddings, to enable efficient similarity searches and other vector-based operations.